13. Further research directions

Researches on the two destruction wars in the North of Vietnam during the Anti-American Resistance War and National Salvation (1965-1972) and the course when Vietnam Labor Party led the people and the armed force to win the two destruction wars in particular have some issues for which its contents and dimensions can hardly transmit simultaneously and fully within the framework of the specific thesis. Together with temporal reversal, historic documentations are always revealed, new viewpoints of study updated, new requirements for study emerged from reality, etc. It opens great opportunities and actual capabilities and imposes demands and responsibilities for the research circle of which is the author of the dissertation. On the viewpoint, the dissertation is just a start of the research path, the postgraduate expects prospective research directions and content as follows:

- Waters and islands construction and defense; anti-blockade and anti-surrounding in the Anti-American Resistance War and National Salvation (1954-1975);

- Calling for internal power in combination with external power; simultaneous maintenance of independence, self-control, national sovereignty in the Anti-American Resistance War and National Salvation (1954-1975);

- Peace and war relation; border, territorial land and waters sea defense imposed in the movements of the world and the region in the current period;

- Solving relationships between the nation and the world, between construction and defense; between government and people, etc. in the country development at present.
